PRESIDENT PENDLETON SPEAKS FOR THE SERVICE FUND.

President Pendleton gave a most inspiring talk in chapel on Thursday morning, October 2. She urged everyone to remember that while the war is over, the suffering in the devastated countries is still intense. Money is needed to help the peasants, as is also the clothing being made in the Red Cross Rooms. The whole world is in a chaotic state, due to the selfishness and in consideration that has characterized the educated and leisure class. Unless the younger generation is willing to assume the responsibility for another war, it must change its present course of thoughtless waste and spending.

President Pendleton asked that every girl give to the Service Fund in proportion to the amount she has for spending money of her own, and not call upon her parents for extra funds. President Pendleton also emphasized the value of giving by the week or the month instead of in a lump sum.

MISS STIMSON AND MISS WHITING SPEAK ON THE UNIT.

One of the most interesting meetings of the year occurred Thursday afternoon, October 2, in the Houghton Memorial Chapel when the vast work of the Wellesley Units was touched upon. Miss Candace Stimson, '92 and Miss Mary Whiting, '08 (leader of the 1st Unit) told of their experiences, and that of the others in their respective units and in addition Miss Stimson gave a little information about the Wellesley Unit working in the Near East.

Miss Whiting spoke first confining her remarks almost solely to a description of the hut of which the unit had charge at the hospital camp in Beau Desert near Bordeaux. This hut was to be a recreation center for the convalescent soldiers and seems to have lived up to that aim fully. It was a real center, thronged to its capacity daily and nightly. "When," after mighty efforts, "chairs had been accumulated," the Hut could seat 800 soldiers at once and all these saw the Wellesley banner, which, Miss Whiting said was put up at the back of the stage and was the first attempt at decoration in what was afterwards a "gay but not aesthetic" interior.

A composite day was next portrayed with Miss Whiting herself buying all kinds of supplies in Bordeaux, including flowers which were bought with Wellesley funds. Another member had charge of the entertainments and in spite of numerous difficulties developed the fine art of sending the boys home happy. Miss Davis tended to the numberless details, supervised the cooking, distributed fruit in the wards, looked out for the comfort of the nurses, and did sewing. The girl who was called a searcher and home communication worker found her duties to lie primarily in the hospital, but she also prepared boxes for outgoing patients, putting in books bought with Wellesley money. Everyone of the Unit helped serve cocoa at the daily afternoon parties, found time to say goodbye to departing patients, and made time from their night's rest to welcome with cocoa and cigarettes the early morning convoys of wounded.

Miss Whiting closed with an earnest expression of gratitude to the Alumnae and members of the college for their aid and encouragement.

Miss Stimson sketched very briefly the sort of work being done in Constantinople by Wellesley graduates, and then turned to the reconstruction work at Chateau-Thierry with which she has been associated closely. She told of amusing encoun-

PLEDGES FOR THE SERVICE FUND: A REMINDER.

If anyone has been overlooked in the distribution of pledges for the Service Fund,—and in the confusion of workers and numbers this may easily have happened,—she is asked to notify Miss Mary Frazer Smith or Constanee Gregory, '20, and she will receive a card.

Those making weekly pledges should remember that the three Sundays on which no collection was received are to be included, but the envelopes for these may be passed in at any time before the second semester.

Anyone who can increase her pledge at any time is invited to do so. Last year Wellesley gave something like $40,000 to patriotic, relief, educational and religious work. That would mean an average of over $20 for each member of the college. Some needs of last year are less urgent now, perhaps; but there are new needs revealing themselves constantly, and many of the old are just as great as before. One need is surely that of at least reaching, even if we cannot go beyond, the finest standard of remembrance of others that we have yet attained for ourselves.

THE NEW FORUM.

From many quarters in the college there has been expressed the desire for informal community discussion of current problems. To meet this desire and to carry on the purpose of the Socialist and Suffrage Clubs, which were discontinued as war measure, the Forum has come into existence. It hopes to have well rounded discussions, and is particularly anxious to receive the support of the conservative as well as the radical members of the Faculty and Student body.

The Forum will hold meetings every other Tuesday evening, at Agora. Occasionally members of the college or specially invited guests will open the meetings with a short talk on the topic for the week. These meetings and the topics will be announced in the News and on the Forum bulletin board. Clippings and articles of interest will be placed on the Forum book-shelf in the Brooks Memorial room of the Library.

The Forum will be brought up for discussion next Tuesday night, October fourteenth, at an all college meeting of the Debating Club. This will be followed hy the first meeting of the Forum, at Agora, on Tuesday, October twenty-first at seven-thirty.

IMPORTANT DEBATING CLUB MEETING.

On Tuesday evening, October 14th, at 7.30 P.M., there will be an important Debating Club meeting at Agora, to consider proposed changes in the Constitution, and to discuss means of improving Wellesley methods of debate. The enthusiasm for Intercollegiate is highest in March; now is the time, however, to determine the best arrangements for it. As the whole college is represented by the debating teams, the whole college is interested in this meeting, the most critical in the history of the Club. The Freshmen are urged to come, especially because they are new members. Their criticism of actual debate is often far keener than that of upperclassmen, and they are likewise interested in its outcome.

Notice of the proposed changes was given September 30. The full constitution is posted on the Entertainment Board. The most important changes are the following:

ARTICLE III. OFFICERS.

"Section II. The duties of the President shall be to preside at all meetings of the Club and of the Executive Board; to plan with the Board the program for the year, and with the Vice-President to carry out this program. She, with the Business Manager shall arrange the intercollegiate debates, and shall take entire charge of all correspondence relating thereunto. She shall authorize all expenditures.

"Section III. The Vice-President shall, in the absence of the President perform the duties of the President, except such business as pertains to the arrangement of intercollegiate debates, and shall together with the President carry out the program for the year. In years when the President debates, the Vice-President shall be chairman of the debating team."

The Vice-President is here assigned definite responsibility during the debate—a new provision.

"Section VII. The Executive Board shall make all plans for the year, and shall act as an advisory board on any question that may arise. They shall also be responsible for the interclass debates, in which the class members shall act as chairmen for their respective teams."

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The News wishes to announce that Janet Matthews, '21, has been chosen to fill a sudden vacancy on the Board.

THE NEW REPRESENTATIVES.

The new House of Representatives members have been chosen and the classes can be congratulated on their selections. The girls who are to represent their various classes are unusually alive to all that is happening in college and are eager to give their intelligent service. There will be many questions arising for them to discuss and act upon and doubtless one of the most important of these will be the question of a different system of representation. There are many pros and cons to this question, but a large proportion of the students feel that the present system could be improved. The system of dormitory or district representatives would give at least more of an opportunity for the students to communicate their opinions to the members of the House than is possible under the present system, and the representatives themselves would be relieved of the responsibility of voting without definite knowledge of the attitude of those whom they represent.

SERVICE FUND.

Every girl who heard President Pendleton speak in Chapel on the Service Fund drive, could not come away without feeling that she really wanted to give all that she could afford to the drive and that she wanted to do her part in helping to relieve the present existing conditions. College girls have been known to get highly wrought up only to have their enthusiasm cool in a remarkably short time. It is to be hoped that this will not be the case with the students who attended Thursday morning chapel. Every penny given to the Service Fund will be put to good use. Indeed, as Miss Pendleton said, it will do more than ever before on account of the high rate of exchange. Therefore let every girl keep up her enthusiasm. Let her pledge all that she justly can, and then let her pay her pledges when due. Moreover let her curb her frivolous spending and instead use her money to buy something better than sodas and "eats."

The new House is elected and will soon start the consideration of subjects which are of importance to the whole college. Usually it seems, however, that the college, having elected its members to the House, sits calmly back—with its duty done and shifts the responsibility to its representatives. This lethargic state continues until the college finds itself face to face with some regulation which is not agreeable. Then a storm of interest and protest follows as that which has greeted the honor system. Of course this does not apply to the entire student body. It does however concern a lamentably large proportion. Even in the question of accepting our new college government system which it would seem should be of vital interest to every member of Wellesley, many girls were so passive that they now inquire who has the right to make certain regulations and whence they derived it.

Community government cannot grow without community support. And if popular interest does not manifest itself in the consideration of a question, what right have the people to complain after that question has been settled without their help?

Is Wellesley Discourteous?

Those of us who went to chapel on the afternoon of October 2nd to HEAR Miss Stimpson and Miss Whiting were more than annoyed by the constant commotion which lasted thruout the entire hour. As the lecture began at 4:40, those who had 3:40 call-outs had reason for coming in late, altho this must have been somewhat disturbing to the speaker.

But it seems inexcusable for groups of two and three to stroll out, during the entire hour, rustling their rain-coats and dropping their unbrellas so that the speakers could hardly be understood beyond the very front rows.

People who were in the audience have offered the following suggestions: (1) Those who intend to leave early should sit near the doors; (2) those who were interested enough, make an effort to be on time. To say the least we have been treating the speakers who really are our guests, with the utmost discourtesy.

Lady Rosie de Coverly at Chapel.

My friend, Lady Rosie de Coverly, when we last met together told me that she had a great mind to go to chapel with me some morning, assuring me that she had so little opportunity for devotions in these horrid times. "I think there must be," said Lady Rosie, "something especially uplifting at seeing young girls gathered together voluntarily for morning worship." She then proceeded to inquire of me the exact hour for chapel and accordingly I arranged to meet her at eight the next morning. "In this way," said she, "we can have a few moments for thought and prayer before the service begins." Lady Rosie added that "it would indeed be an inspiration for the day to see busy young college women pause for their devotions."

My friend met me as agreed the next morning promptly at eight and had, I found, provided herself with her own prayer book and Hymnal. We proceeded into the chapel and my old friend smiled with that satisfaction, which a mind seasoned with devotion naturally feels at the sight of a chapel for devotions. We knelt for our prayers but I was at once surprised with a loud whispering by two girls behind. They were giggling in fine order and whispering with energy, "And, my dear, he said to me." Just ahead of us some one seemed to be slamming books on the floor, and on either side girls were speaking with briskness about their academic duties. A loud tramping startled my friend to such an extent that she rose hastily and was much confused to find it only the choir reaching their stalls. "Well," said Lady Rosie, "I suppose we will now be able to offer our worship."

The choir began to sing and my old friend entered into the devotions—but six girls came in late just ahead of us and found the entire row to wiggle down from seat to seat so that they might not be separated. For my own part I could not but be annoyed and must not omit that during the reading of the lesson, a girl to our right evidently remembered that she had forgotten something and climbed out over Lady Rosie and myself.

My old friend finds a great deal of pleasure from the old familiar Hymns. "They are like valuable old friends," says Lady Rosie, "always cheering and comforting," but there was a very remarkable silence and stillness during the hymns because they were unfamiliar to everyone, even to the choir. I was indeed distressed when Lady Rosie said to me as we went out that "it was odd perhaps but she had not been able to get the benefit and aid which she usually received from her devotions."

Tacks!

It is commonly supposed that the walls of Tower Court and Claflin were covered with burlap in order that thumb tacks and pins could be used without injury to the walls. However the mandate has gone out—no tacks!

In the interest of justice it is said that when the Quad walls remain tackless, Tower Court burlap must also stand tackless. But to be truly fair and just, Wellesley must insist on shrouds for the full length mirrors and take careful care to stop off the showers that Claflin enjoys when Stone does not.

So let us not be just—and let Tower and Claflin have tacks. 1921.

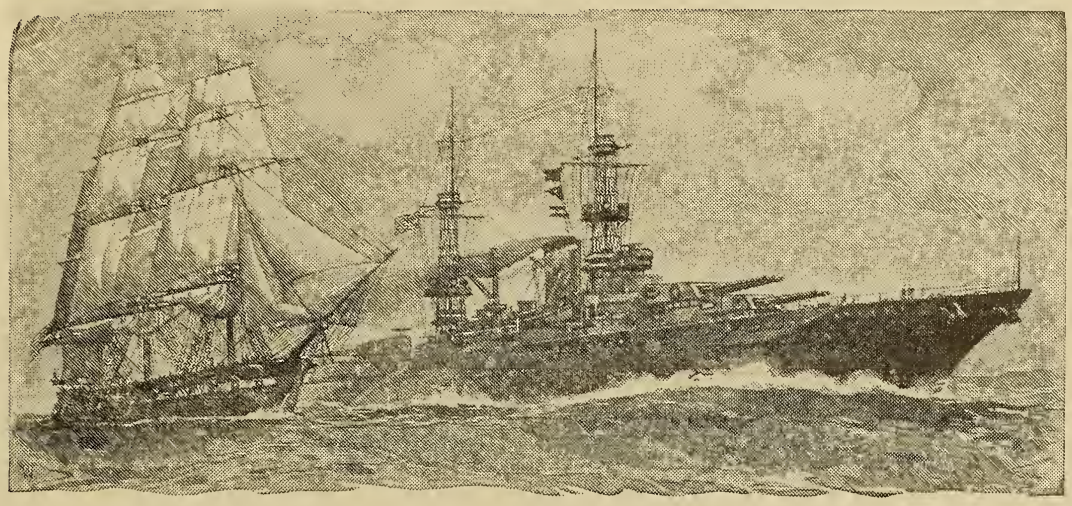
News Competition!

Two new members of the NEWS, Wellesley College News Board, are to be elected soon from 1922. The competition will begin this week. Any one who was not able to come to the meeting on Tuesday see Mary C. Dooley in office hours which will be posted on the class board.



The "Constitution" of To-day—Electrically Propelled

THE U. S. S. "New Mexico," the first battleship of any nation to be electrically propelled, is one of the most important achievements of the scientific age. She not only develops the maximum power and, with electrical control, has greater flexibility of maneuver, which is a distinct naval advantage, but also gives greater economy. At 10 knots, her normal cruising speed, she will steam on less fuel than the best turbine-driven ship that preceded her.

Figures that tell the Story of Achievement

Length—624 feet
Width—97 feet
Displacement—32,000 tons
Fuel capacity—a million gallons (fuel oil)
Power—28,000 electrical horsepower
Speed—21 knots

The electric generating plant, totaling 28,000 horsepower, and the propulsion equipment of the great super-dreadnaught were built by the General Electric Company. Their operation has demonstrated the superiority of electric propulsion over old-time methods and a wider application of this principle in the merchant marine is fast making progress.

Six auxiliary General Electric Turbine-Generators of 400 horsepower each, supply power for nearly 500 motors, driving pumps, fans, shop machinery, and kitchen and laundry appliances, etc.

Utilizing electricity to propel ships at sea marks the advancement of another phase of the electrical industry in which the General Electric Company is the pioneer. Of equal importance has been its part in perfecting electric transportation on land, transforming the potential energy of waterfalls for use in electric motors, developing the possibilities of electric lighting and many other similar achievements.

As a result, so general are the applications of electricity to the needs of mankind that scarcely a home or individual today need be without the benefits of General Electric products and service.

An illustrated booklet describing the "New Mexico," entitled, "The Electric Ship," will be sent upon request. Address General Electric Company, Desk 44, Schenectady, New York.

ters with their French assistants. In the matter of their assisting the French, however, she explained that it was not material aid that counted now so much as a sort of encouragement and co-operation which should help to bring back the morale of people twice driven back from their homes by the Germans. "It is really community service—to get life back to normal."

The children and young people are already showing the effect of the establishment of the community center and fifty citizens of Luay on the first day patronized the store started by t' unit. Miss Stimson said that she wanted members of the Wellesley Clubs who hated to make these black aprons for children to realize that they were purchased for and displayed with pride by the children of the village. What further work to help these people can be done, however, depends upon the support which Wellesley provides for the purpose.

Important Debating Club Meeting.

The conduct of interclass debates has formerly devolved upon the class members alone.

Article V. Election of Officers.

"Section I. The President shall be elected in the spring term together with the presidents of College Government and Christian Association, except in such cases as the Senate, upon recommendation by or with the approval of the Executive Board, shall authorize the postponement of said election. The President shall be from the incoming Senior class and shall be elected by the college at large. Nominations shall be made by the Executive Board of the Club and by two scattering ballots from the college, the three highest nominees on the second ballot being the candidates for President. In the final ballot a plurality of votes cast shall decide the election.

"Section II. The class members shall be elected by their respective classes before the second week in October, except in the case of the Freshman member who shall be elected before the first of November. The Executive Board shall submit to the Freshman class ten names from which it recommends the member be elected.

"Section IV. In case of resignation of any officer, the Executive Board shall decide upon the method of procuring her successor."

This article, although it contains extensive changes from the old constitution, is in accordance with present methods.

Please think carefully over these changes and come to the meeting. There are many things to be discussed and everyone is needed. Tuesday, October 14, 7.30 P.M., at Agora.

The Debating Club also regrets to announce that its president, Elizabeth Cox, has been forced to give up her responsibilities. For the present, the Vice-President, Rachel Jones, is acting in her place, and she will be glad to give further information about the constitution.

A PHILOSOPHY OF HISTORY.

At the morning service in Houghton Memorial Chapel, Sunday, Oct. 5, the Reverend John W. Platner of Andover Theological Seminary took for his text: "My righteousness endureth forever and my salvation from generation unto generation." Through all the history which the world is slowly and painfully writing out, God is felt, working out man's destiny with him.

"We live in an age of violation of law, when many condemn right and justic because they are the old ethical standard of the bourgeoisie, or capitalistic class. It is not a question of name but of essential right or wrong, and whether they matter. The modern world has set up a new commandment, "Thou shalt not be found out." Puritanism had one enduring merit—it was based on the enduring moral law of God, the distinction between right and wrong. The troubles of the present day come because the leaders of the people are indifferent to this distinction—that was the cause of the war."

"When you are tempted to believe that justice of God has gone astray, turn to this text of salvation—without the spirit of which we would have had no Christian Savior, Christian church, or any Christian life at all. The only organizations which can exist permanently are those which are based on a religious foundation."

"Stand where the prophets stood, where you as students of learning should stand. Have a philosophy of learning history of your own, based on the enduring righteousness of God, and resting on that philosophy build something which shall be a not unworthy part of the temple of God."

Sometime during the first weeks of college, a blue and green rain-cape. Return to Muriel Starret, 7 Webb.

SUNDAY VESPERS.

The college was fortunate enough to hear Miss Lucila Miner and Miss Ding speak at Vespers on Sunday evening, October 5, at Memorial Chapel. Miss Miner is the Dean of the North China Union College for Women, and Miss Ding is the Y. W. C. A. Secretary of that college. Miss Miner spoke first, giving a report of the work and organization of Wellesley's sister college.

Formerly the educated women of China were of the upper classes only but even they were shut in and had no opportunity for freedom or advancement. The North China Union College wishes to bring education to all classes and to give the women the opportunities previously denied them. The college was founded fifty-five years ago in Peking with very inadequate buildings and equipment, few teachers and pupils from poor families who did not want their children at home. The number has increased slowly but steadily, however, and various improvements have been added as new interest in the project was aroused. Four missions are now represented, the Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist, and American Board. Its graduates come from all parts of China and go out again, many as teachers who are so much needed, many as missionaries, social workers, and as physicians.

The college is in a transitory and consequently unsettled state at present since it recently has been made the women's department of the Peking University. China itself is in a transitory period when great efforts must be made for its development. One of its greatest needs is the education of its women — its greatest "undeveloped resources." Without this, said Miss Miner, the new China will fall short of its potentialities.

Following Miss Miner, Miss Ding spoke in Chinese, interpreted by Miss Miner. Miss Ding spoke of the great amount of illiteracy in China and the scarcity of schools, relating how much the few Chinese students were doing, however, to awaken the national consciousness.

Miss Miner then concluded with the hope that America would assume a voluntary mandatory over Chinese women in whom lay so many potentialities and hopes for the future.

ADDRESS BY DR. LIVINGSTON FARRAND.

Dr. Livingston Farrand, chairman of the Red Cross central committee, in an address at Red Cross headquarters in Washington, said in part:—

"For us of the Red Cross it is our duty to contribute the best we have to improving general fundamental conditions throughout the country, conditions without the improvement of which the solution of our problems cannot be reached. How can we contribute to the betterment of these fundamental conditions? That question brings us straight back to this fact—that the war has accentuated and sharpened our realization of certain conditions the existence of which has for centuries caused the distress of the world. For the greatest contributing factor in disturbing the happiness of mankind reduces in the last instance to questions of physical well being, to problems of health and disease. A large proportion of the disease of the world is preventable disease. Nations have been coming to a point where they realize that fact, and they are turning—the whole world is turning—to organizations of every kind for help in the prevention of preventable disease.

INSPECTION IS CORDIALLY INVITED

"This is not talk; it is fact. We are now seeing that these things that have been known for years by science, by medical science, are being realized by the people. And the question the people are everywhere asking is 'What are we to do?' They are looking for help; they are looking for guidance; and they naturally look to the organizations that are built upon such a basis and have been guided in such a way as to beget confidence. And the organization in this country that is best fitted to take the leadership in this great movement, this thrilling, inspiring movement—is the Red Cross.

"For twenty years, in the United States, stimulated by the enlightened interest of individuals here and there in the country, there have been growing up movements for the prevention of this or that preventable disease. You know about the movement for the prevention of tuberculosis; for the control of cancer; for the welfare of children; for the prevention of venereal disease and many others. In the meantime, there has also been growing up an appreciation of what is a fundamentally important point—namely, that the responsibilty in the last instance for the prevention of disease is in itself an official and public responsibility.

"We must look to our states; we must look to our municipalities and local authorities. The fight against disease, the fight for the improvement of health, is a local fight. I am emphasizing this because you will see very clearly that for this reason again the Red Cross becomes peculiarly fitted to act in the circumstances. We are organized in such a way as to meet this difficulty. For it is the local group of Red Cross people that is the operating unit, and therefore it is the local group that can attack such problems as those I have mentioned.

"It is only within six years that there was a state law passed in the United States that even approached an adequate public health law. It is now the best public health law in existence. It was passed in New York and was quickly followed by a similar one in Massachusetts and since that time by various other states. You can not do these things in a day. You must first build up a mass of public opinion. Consequently such a movement is slow and there still remains the necessity for stimulating by private activity a realization of the opportunity, a realization of all that can be accomplished.

"But do not think because this field of health is to be the big fundamentally important problem of the Red Cross that we intend to drop our other responsibilities. Don't forget for a moment that all of these other activities of the Red Cross—home service, which has meant so much to this country in the years of the war, and disaster relief, one of the prime objects of the Red Cross—are to be carried on as enthusiastically as before. This movement for health is in no way antagonistic to any other function of the Red Cross, but it does afford a way of tying up nearly all of these activities into a single great movement."

THE SERENADING SOPHOMORES!

In a long line, like a snake be-jeweled by the many vari-colored lights, came the Serenading "Sophomores a-singing, with their lanterns a-swinging", on the evening of Saturday, October 4, 1919. But this affair was not a snake nor on close examination, did its parts and bright spots resemble anything less than very cunning "Buster Browns," with purple hats and ties. Each one carried high a stick surmounted by a brilliant lantern, but the principal "Stick" (not like a stick, at all) was very energetically and perfectly leading the singing of these "Buster Browns", from a car bedecked with purple.

We liked their songs—they were peppy, sensible (each having a keen point) and well sung. Any disputants, to the fore!.....But none come—everyone agrees in giving three cheers for '22, as Serenading Sophos.

THE WELLESLEY UNIT.

In France and Italy.

In the fall Quarterly it will be possible to report the permanent arrangements for our work in France. It is not now settled just how many of the earlier workers will remain. Elizabeth Bass has returned home; Emma Hawkridge, Mary Rogers and Corinne Crane were surrended to the Army by the Y. M. C. A. in order that they might carry on to completion the important educational work that they had begun; Eliza Newkirk was transferred to Genoa where she showed soldiers on leave about the city. She writes: "If I could keep on this same job with a new group each day for many months I believe I could wipe the name 'wop' out of the American vocabulary." Her contribution was usually a day's sight seeing between the night travel from France to Rome and included a visit to the house of Christopher Columbus. Later she served also in the dry canteen.

From Brest, Alice Walmsley sent a photograph of soldiers standing in line for their turn in the Y restaurant. "The line certainly was not posed," she says, "it grows that way." There are more than a hundred French restaurants in Brest within easy distance of us, where soldiers are welcome and can have almost anything cooked for them, but there is no line outside any but "Y" places. The difference in price is the main reason, but also our food is more what the A. E. F. knows and wants.

Some idea of the scale of work in this "Y" Canteen is given by the fact that 900 dozen eggs lasted eight days; and $1,000 was taken in one day by a restaurant with eighty chairs where many men eat less than forty cents worth and no man could eat a dollar's worth. "The nice things that are said to us are many and certainly do compensate for our work." That they must be very nice will be seen when it is understood that the work means standing all day "because there is no place to sit except on the sugar barrel and there are twelve of us to sit on that. The whole problem is one of speed, for the men must be served now, not after things are in the shape we desire. We can't build a real bake oven for it wouldn't be done before the troops leave."

In the East we have had a Wellesley representative. After the armistice Anna Young, '05, of our First Unit, was asked by the Red Cross to go to Palestine, where she has done much needed relief work among Syrians and Armenians at Aleppo. Thus has our field of service broadened from the many centers in France eastward to Constantinople and still further east to Jerusalem.

In addition to maintaining our Wellesley Units in the field, thanks to the generosity of Wellesley women and friends, we have been able to give our Units funds for special relief work. As a result, in many French homes the name of Wellesley is already cherished. Ada Davis writes of a little baby christened "Marguerite de la Wellesley." Marguerite's mother had walked six miles every day for work at the hospital to keep her little family together. Our girls became interested, found she belonged to a well-to-do family, but with her husband at the front, and with war prices, was having a great struggle to keep her children properly fed and clothed. Our Unit came to the rescue, and the mother, as an expression of her gratitude, named the baby "Marguerite de la Wellesley."

Anna Young tells of an especially bright little orphan boy, whom the special fund assisted in entering a school. Who knows but Wellesley may thus have saved and educated the future president of a Syrian republic? These are just two illustrations of the innumerable ways our funds has been used. That Mary Whiting in the midst of all that busy, rushing life, has given such time and thought to the way our special fund should be spent, seems a beautiful instance of invaluable womanly sympathy.

In many instances our Wellesley Unit workers have thus been able to render aid for which the Red Cross funds could not legally be used; in fact, without our special fund such aid would not have been given.

Now, as to the future? First, we plan to continue to support, with all our hearts, our Wellesley Unit in the Near East. We are pledged to continue this work till the middle of January, 1920; it may be we ought to support it for a year longer, if the need continues to be so great.

Second, our work in France. This we are reorganizing and plan to concentrate on one Unit, still to be called the Wellesley College Relief Unit.

Last February Mary Whiting cabled that the French Government requested our Wellesley Unit to take charge of the reconstruction of a group of villages near Belleau Wood, a section identified with American victories. Your committee immediately accepted this new responsibility. Mary Whiting and three of the Unit are now organizing the work and will remain until a new Unit is well established. I am happy to announce that five of our new Unit are to sail tomorrow, June 14; Dr. Louise Tayler-Jones, '96, Christine Myrick, '11, Julia Drew, '12, Bernice Van Slyke, '13, and Frances Bogert, '14. Candace Stimson, '92, preceded them in May to help in organizing the new work and will return in the early fall. Three more, we hope, will be off in early July. These are Dr. Mary Marvell, '94, Julia Larimer, '07, and Lucile Kroger, '11.

This new work of reconstruction is most necessary, owing to the utter ruin of this region. Mary Whiting writes that not even pictures can give a fair conception of the systematic devastation wrought by the Germans. The reconstruction is most interesting, for it is creating anew the homes of France. For this work we shall need motor cars for transportation, household furnishings, seeds, farm tools, medical supplies, etc., etc., and—most of all—money, money to meet these needs, as well as to maintain our workers.

Shall we not here and now, therefore, pledge ourselves anew to these two splendid undertakings, our Unit in the Near East, and our Wellesley College Relief Unit in France?

And in closing may I read the vote passed at a recent meeting of our War Service Committee in which I know you will all wish to join.

"Voted: That the Committee record their gratitude to Mary B. Whiting, as Director, and to all the returning members of the First Wellesley Unit, for the fine spirit and the signal efficiency with which they have met this call to service. The committee feel that the golden opinions they have won are a beautiful gift to their college and a very concrete expression of its best ideals."

Grace G. Crocker,
Chairman of War Service Committee.

THE ANNUAL GOWN DISPLAY AT WELLESLEY.

Saturday marked the end of the first week of the Annual Gown display at Wellesley. The beginning seemed most worthy. We only trust that none of the models will be academically forced to lose their noble and dignified place.

The models for the Gown Display this year were selected by a committee, far famed for their notable choices of D. G. Yonng Ladies (D. G. may be transulated in any way the reader desires. Diploma Grade is, we think, a fairly suitable choice). The committee consisted of one Dean and one Secretary, aided by any number of more or less interested instructors. We have it on authority that the models this year are superior to any before. (The class of 1920 is our authority).

It is always an interesting sight the first morning of College Chapel to note the different styles of wearing the gowns, and especially the different angles of the flat black article applied somewhere about the face. (The choice lies with the model). The Mathematics Department is particularly elated this year because the models have devised many new and here-to-fore unknown angles. In fact as one or two models sailed down the aisle, the Mathematics Department was observed to dance a geometrical jig of joy. We are pleased to observe how in every way these 1920 models strive to please our worthy faculty.

Another interesting article of apparel is the piece of white mosquito netting collected about the throat. It has a decided advantage this year because, as we have noted, the mosquities are ever present at our devotions. Although "devotions" is an odd name for such a social gathering place as the Chapel is becoming. This mosquito netting appliance must, of necessity, be fastened at some point in the rear of the neck. However, one model found it more desirabe to fasten hers just behind the left ear and even this seems to be permissible. The favorite point is the top hook—This interferes in no way with the gulps of embarrassment which accompany the models in their rush for front seats. Also, this fastening point has another advantage in that it makes an exactly contrary angle to the head gear.

The neat, most approved style is acquired by dashing the mortar board firmly forward on the arch of the nose. (The attached tassel may then cause temporary blindness but may be avoided by spasmodic slashings at the offender with any free hand the model may possess). The mosquito netting in this instance is worn as tightly drawn as possible so that, when the model speaks, she doesn't, and a gargle of deep throated tones is produced in lieu of her usual soft intonations. It seems to be required that the cheeks in this case be camouflaged by a vivid dash of scarlet. We may be wrong in this requirement; however it has been observed.

The Gown Display has been a decided success the 1920 models are not only a strikingly handsome collection but are likewise highly ingenious. One clever device we noted is the new use of lieutenants' shoulder bars, society pins, and the old faithful safety. These are placed firmly in the mosquito netting and serve a two-fold purpose, that of clamping together the netting and also that of forming a point on which the eyes of the following models may be glued.

We speak for the entire college when we give our hearty congratulation to the Dean and the Secretary in their clever choice of models and also we offer our sincerest congratulations to the notable adjusters of the gowns and necessary accessories.

CONCERT CALENDAR.

From Boston Transcript.

MR. KREISLER'S RETURN—MR. ELMAN FOR ANOTHER VIOLINIST—MR. RAKHMANINOV AGAIN—MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK AS WELL.

Sunday afternoon, Oct. 12, in Symphony Hall, a concert by Mme. Schumann-Heink for her only appearance in Boston this season. The usual loyal following will welcome the singer whom at least two generations in our concert-halls have known. She will be heard in all old Italian air, two pieces from Saint-Saens's opera, "Samson and Delilah," and in sundry songs to English words. Several of them were written by the assisting pianist, Mr. La Forge.

Sunday evening, Oct. 12, in Symphony Hall, a concert by Mr. Elman for his "first and last" appearance in Boston this season. The violinist, excelling, as heretofore, in richness of tone, in breadth and glow of phrase and in songful an sentimental ardors, will play a sonata by Handel; Ernst's concerto in F-sharp minor; Bach's Chaconne; two arrangements of his own; Bruch's "Kol Nidrei," transcribed for violin, and Sarasate's "Basque Caprice."

Friday afternoon, Oct. 17, in Symphony Hall, the second of the afternoon concerts of the Symphony Orchestra with Mr. Monteux conducting.

Saturday evening, Oct. 18, in Symphony Hall, the second of the evening concerts of the Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Monteux conducting.

Sunday afternoon, Oct. 19, in Symphony Hall, a concert by Mr. Kreisler, the violinist, returning after two years of retirement, to a public that has long sought and applauded him as musician and man, and that will renew its old pleasure in the magic of his tone, the range of his skill, the fineness of his perceptions, and the charm with which he invests all his work.

Thursday evening, Oct. 23, in Symphony Hall, a second concert by the "Quartetto Romano" or, as they are now called in America, "the Sistine Soloists"—men-singers, even for soprano and alto parts, exercising their voices and skill in ecclesiastical pieces from the Roman liturgy and in lighter numbers for four male voices.

Friday afternoon, Oct. 24, in Symphony Hall, the third of the afternoon concerts of the Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Monteux conducting.

Saturday evening, Oct. 25, in Symphony Hall, the third of the evening concerts of the Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Monteux conducting.

Sunday afternoon, Oct. 26, in Symphony Hall, a concert by Mr. Rakhmaninov as pianist and composer, established last season an impressive presence, masterful technician, grave and penetrating musician, eloquent through all the range of his own and others' pieces.

FLORENCE EARLE COATES.

This distinguished poet of the elder, classic school, Mrs. Edward Horner Coates of Philadelphia, is to be the guest of Wellesley on Friday, October seventeenth. By the gift of a generous alumna, Miss Eunice C. Smith, 1898, Mrs. Coates will give a recital from her poems in the drawing room of Tower Court at eight o'clock that Friday evening. All lovers of poetry are cordially invited to come—and to come on time. The two volumes of Mrs. Coates' Collected Poems may be found, if one is fortunate, on the Reserve Shelf for course 16 in the English room of the Library.

This is the first visit of Mrs. Coates to what she calls our "noble college." Let us gladly come out in goodly numbers to bid her welcome and receive her message. K. L. B.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

No one interested in the Europe of today should fail to hear Miss Lavinia Newell of Red Cross Headquarters who speaks in Billings Hall on Thursday, October ninth.

"Miss Newell has recently returned from a three months' trip abroad where she made a careful study among the refugees and other war sufferers in order to determine the future need of production by the women of America. Her impression, gained after a week spent in the devastated regions of Northern France and a four hundred mile trip by motor camion, is that after the program of the coming winter is completed the emergency will be at an end.

" 'The Red Cross stands for Emergency aid,' Miss Newell said, in talking over her trip at Division Headquarters, 'and it has never asked the people to do what wasn't necessary. We are asking the people now simply to complete the work on which they have started. We know that they will consider to do so a privilege.' "

Be sure to come; you cannot afford to miss her!

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

At Christian Association Meeting, Wednesday evening, October 2nd, in Houghton Memorial Chapel, Dr. Edward Payson Drew spoke on the appeal of the New Internationalism. Dr. Drew who has been in the east far several years, teaching in the Deputy College in Peking and has visited many Chinese educational centers, congratulated Wellesley on her choice of a sister college. The North China Union College to which are sent the daughters of men of influence from all over China represents a most important strategic opportunity for the education and advancement of Chinese women, and one in which we should be proud to have a part.

Dr. Drew went on to speak of the needs of the world, east and west, which were alike and must, therefore ultimately bring about the New Internationalism, and illustrated by typical incidents, the needs and aspirations of the Chinese which are so like our own. Eastern nations have been sending students here who learn our institutions and introduce them at home, forming a golden shuttle which weaves the garment for the New Internationalism.

Commerce and exchange, it is said, follows the flag, but, said Dr. Drew, "something always precedes the flag, the Missionary." It is he who has laid the foundation for the New Internationalism by teaching Christ's ideals. Christ himself was an Asiatic, who first came to preach love and a civilization founded on his principles. Let us establish our life on Him, let us, while being patriotic citizens of our own country, still be citizens of the world and work wherever Christ may lead us for the benefit of all humanity.

EXCHANGES.

HARVARD

In spite of the fact that it is the first year after the war, the registration for the entire university is 5017 students. The college proper has 2504 students, only 78 less than the year preceeding the war. The Graduate School of Business Administration has an enrollment over twice as large as that of any previous year.

WILLIAMS

"Victory Day" is to be celebrated on October 17. On that day the Williams Victory Medal will be presented to all Williams men who served in the Army or Navy, or with any military organization of the Allies.

According to the latest statistics, says the Boston Evening Transcript, the total of Williams men in the service is placed at 1721. This number comprises over 40 per cent of all known Williams men, both graduates, under-graduates and sometime members.

The Victory Medal, which is to be made of bronze, represents on the obverse side a trench line of doughboys with full equipment about to charge over the top. It bears the legend, "For Humanity, 1918." On the reverse side there is an imaginary portrait of Colonel Ephraim Williams in his officers' Continental uniform mounted upon a charger. In the upper circumference the words, "E Liberalitate E. Williams Armigeri 1793," are transcribed from the college seal, while on the lower portion is inscribed "The Williams Medal." The designer of the medal is James E. Fraser of New York City, who also designed the Victory Medal which is to be given by Congress to all members of the United States Army.

TECHNOLOGY

A registration of 2500 students—500 more than any previous enrollment—is expected, 1000 of which are Freshmen.

Regular classes do not begin until 9:00 during the first term. The 8:00 period may be used for some special classes.
